DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE

Profile

About Department of Political science

Political science,

The systematic study of governance by the application of empirical and generally scientific methods of analysis. As traditionally defined and studied, political science examines the state and its organs and institutions. The contemporary discipline, however, is considerably broader than this, encompassing studies of all the societal, cultural, and psychological factors that mutually influence the operation of government and the body politic.

Although political science borrows heavily from the other social sciences, it is distinguished from them by its focus on power—defined as the ability of one political actor to get another actor to do what it wants—at the international, national, and local levels. Political science is generally used in the singular, but in French and Spanish the plural (sciences politiques and ciencias políticas, respectively) is used, perhaps a reflection of the discipline's eclectic nature. Although political science overlaps considerably with political philosophy, the two fields are distinct. Political philosophy is concerned primarily with political ideas and values, such as rights, justice, freedom, and political obligation (whether people should or should not obey political authority); it is normative in its approach (i.e., it is concerned with what ought to be rather than with what is) and rationalistic in its method. In contrast, political science studies institutions and behavior, favors the descriptive over the normative, and develops theories or draws conclusions based on empirical observations, which are expressed in quantitative terms where possible.

Vision:

- To be a National Center of Excellence for Advanced Studies in the Field of Politics.
- To Inspire the Next Generation to Develop Ideas on Peaceful Coexistence, the Ethos of Unity in Diversity, Understanding and Respecting Cultures to help Build a Just and Tolerant Society
- To develop into a Faculty of Political Studies in the near future.

Mission:

- To be a leading Department in the Discipline of Political Science
- To Teach and Research Political issues with Focus on the Contributions of the Indian Scholarship and Perspectives.
- To Train the Students to become a responsible citizen and contribute to the well-being of the Society and the Country at large.
- To make the Students Academically proficient and practically vibrant to face Real-Life Situations.
